What to look at

WHAT TO LOOK AT, IN THIS ORDER

The curriculum asks for writing that is legible and consistent, and names two things in particular: that the downstrokes of letters are parallel and equally spaced, and that lines of writing are far enough apart that the tails below one line do not run into the tops of the next.

So look at those two first, before anything else. Hold the page at arm's length. Do the downstrokes all lean the same way? Are the gaps between them even?

Then: are the small letters all the same height? Do the tall letters reach the top line? Do the tails go below the line and no further? Is the gap between words about the width of one finger?

Mark one of these at a time. A child told five things at once fixes none of them.

Words to copy

From the statutory spelling list for your year, so the handwriting practice is spelling practice as well.

Sentences to copy

Copy each one underneath. Read it first, so you are writing a sentence and not a row of letters.

A record, written at the time, does not change.

The old road passed four villages, and some drivers stopped.

He looked at his map for long enough that the hall went quiet.

The scales still balance. I have tested them.

SAMPLE PAGES

You have read a few pages. The pack is longer.

What you are holding is a short sample, taken from different parts of the pack so that you can see how a week is planned and what a child is actually asked to do, before you decide.

The complete pack, and the rest of the academic materials, are on our website: schemes of work for a parent teaching at home, and practice packs for the skills children get stuck on.
